A Window to the Past:

New Orleans' Odyssey House Rises from the Remnants of Former Ford Dealership

CHALLENGE

Even a massive fire and Hurricane Katrina could not stop the eventual reconstruction of a historic two-story Landmark. Designed in 1925 by noted NOLA architect Emile Weil for the Bohn Motor Company Automobile dealership, the re-construction project began when the building was lacking a roof and windows. Only the existing brick exterior façade was salvageable.

SOLUTION

Practically rebuilding from the ground up on the existing base, architects selected WINCO's 3250 Steel Rep Windows to create a similar look to the original building. The new windows — featuring laminated hurricane-resistant glass, 5/8 muntin grids, and a Quaker Bronze Kynar finish — are ready to stand the test of time and New Orleans' turbulent weather. The historic building is now home to Odyssey House, an addiction treatment center.
